A new online portal where University of Utah staff and faculty may purchase, download, and manage software from the university's Office of Software Licensing \(OSL\) will go live on Wednesday, April 13, 2022.

The portal replaces the OSL store (login required), accessed via the Shop for software button on the OSL website. After April 13, faculty and staff will still be able to access the portal using that button, and the Office of Software Licensing tile in Campus Information Services (CIS) will continue to direct to software.utah.edu.

The new portal merges the OSL store used by university employees with the Student Software Catalog, an interface introduced to U students in 2020.

The new software catalog is designed to provide an improved user experience for members of the U community who need to access free and for-purchase software licensed and distributed by OSL. Many software products are available at a discounted rate through campus licensing agreements.

Note: The screenshots above are cropped for space and do not reflect the entire product landing page, in this case, for EndNote software. A full-page PDF version can be accessed in Box (login required).

Features of the new software catalog user interface include:

- Improved usability
- Easier navigation, particularly the tabs:
 - Order History
 - Download Again
 - Returns
 - Submit Feedback
- Sections on the landing page for:
 - Featured Products
 - Free and Specially Priced Software
 - Software Installation Files

Additional features may be added in the future as the software catalog is further developed.
