The University of Utah this week announced its partnership with online learning platform Coursera, through which U faculty, staff, students, and community members have free access to Coursera courses and certificates for a limited time.

Coursera's catalog includes nearly 4,000 basic and applied courses — including business, computer science, data science, information technology, and personal development — from more than 190 universities and businesses.

Available courses and certificates include:

- Agile development
- Project management
- Instructional technologies and design
- Machine learning
- Cybersecurity
- Programming
- Time management
- Effective communication
- Strategic leadership and management
- Business analytics

Course registration is open until July 31, 2020. Participants will have until September 30, 2020 to complete registered courses.

To sign up for Coursera or learn more about the partnership, please visit Continuing Education & Community Engagement's Coursera Connection web page.
